Computer Games

Many of the boys will have games consoles such as PlayStations, X Box and Game Cubes. These all have the capacity for multiplayer activities.

Organise with a few parents or leaders, for a few consoles and a good range of multiplayer games to be brought in on an evening. The games should range from 2 to 4 players, dependant on the size of screen, number of controllers etc. If possible set the consoles up in a separate room and then throughout the night the boys can take it in turns to play.

Why not borrow or hire a few copies of the same game to be played on the different machines and run a competition to find a winner. Another idea is to have a 'console triathlon' where the boys move round three different genres of game (i.e. shoot'em'up, racing game and football game) and get scored on their performance in each game.

Note: Games should be suitable for the ages of the boys playing them.
